

Dr. Marcela Selecká retired

This is to inform our readers and subscribers that the Co-founder and long-time Editor of the journal Powder Metallurgy Progress, Marcela Selecká, PhD, retired at the beginning of 2015. She served as the Editor-in-chief of the journal since its establishment in 2001. Under her leadership, the journal established itself at the international level as one of the prominent scientific platforms in the area of Powder Metallurgy. She created numerous contacts in the scientific community and made every effort to assure that the papers published in the journal were valuable, original, innovative, and of high scientific quality.

Marcela, on the occasion of your retirement, we wish to thank you for the many years of hard work in the shaping and management of the journal. We hope that your retirement as Editor will not end our cooperation and that you will continue, as a member of the Editorial Board, to help us to further improve the level of the journal. We also hope that together we can find time for memories of our work together in the journal offices. We wish you many years of satisfying life spent with your family, good health, and other fulfilling activities that were commonplace in your working life.

With the onset of 2015 other changes in the journal have also taken place. A new Editorial Board was created and Dr. Beáta Ballóková was appointed as the Editor-in-Chief. We wish her and the all new Editorial Board good luck and success.

Prof. Herbert Danninger
Chairman of the Editorial Board
